Tour de Forest adding authors

Looking for an enjoyable way to spend the August long weekend? The 2019 Tour de Forest Studio Tour will feature 27 artisans and 11 studios. Join the fun and meet local artists as you enjoy the stunning countryside of the Haliburton Highlands.

Mark your calendars and save the dates Aug. 3 and 4, for the 13th annual Tour de Forest Summer Studio Tour. The studios will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. Check out the Tour de Forest studio tour map and plan your route.

For the first time, the Kaleidoscope of Local Authors will join local artisans at the 13th annual Tour de Forest Summer Stu dio Tour. This is an historic first for local authors and artisans to feature both visual and literary media during the always popular Tour de Forest Studio tour. It is also the second annual Kaleidoscope event.

Charlene McConnell said, "I'm quite excited to have authors on the tour this year. They add a whole new dimension to the creative process for our visitors to enjoy."

This year, the Kaleidoscope of Authors will feature seven local authors. Drop by Studio D and learn the rest of the story as you speak with the authors about where their ideas came from.

Looking for a unique gift? What could be more exclusive than a gift hand crafted by a local artisan? How about an autographed book from a local author? This is a great opportunity to see first hand the amazing craftsmanship of our local artisans.

Irene Davidson Fisher stated, "The authors are thrilled to be part of the Tour de Forest Summer Studio Tour and are grateful to Laurie O'Reilly for providing a venue for us."

Brochures with maps will be distributed around and beyond Haliburton Highlands. The Studio Tour information is available on http://www.haliburtontourdeforest.com and visit the Tour de Forest Facebook Page for up-to-date information and the Studio Tour Map.

Safe Haven podcast sharing the dark and light of women's lives

JENN WATT
County Life Editor

Amanda Lytle is buzzing with energy as she talks about her new podcast, Safe Haven. She's got a list of more than 70 women who have either already been interviewed or who have agreed to be. She's got a new computer and a borrowed microphone. And she's got a vision.

"I have never been so excited or believed in anything as much as I believe in this podcast," says Lytle in an interview from her Ingoldsby home. "Every fibre in my being believes in the Safe Haven podcast."

The idea of Safe Haven came to her on the cusp of her 31st birthday in May. A friend was organizing a big birthday bash, and she started thinking about the mix of women who would be attending.

"I started thinking of the calibre of women and the stories they were coming together with," she said. She realized that everyone has a story to share and those stories can help others. As soon as the idea was hatched, she began putting the pieces in place – rapidly.

The name came to her one night when she was sleeping and the next day before work she had already registered an Instagram handle, set up a Gmail account and had her podcast platform ready to go.

The first three podcasts from Safe Haven have included Nancy Brownsberger discussing post-traumatic stress disorder following a life-altering house fire; Michelle Moraal on growing up with a father who is addicted to drugs; and Kortney Ecclestone on what it was like to be a teenager living with epilepsy.

The stories are complex and nuanced and the episode length, at about 50 minutes each, allows the subjects to expand upon their personal stories.

"By listening to people be so vulnerable and emotional my hope is that people will start talking," Lytle says.

Lytle teaches high school through the Virtual Learning Centre, which means she conducts her classes online. It's taught her about the importance of tone and humour, about keeping things interesting for those learning outside of a traditional classroom space.

"Prior to this mic, it had literally just been teaching online, recording stuff, because I record every lesson," says Lytle, referring to the microphone a friend of hers from North Bay leant her to get started.

She says right now her podcasts are technically rudimentary. She often records in her home, which can create some background noise. The fridge hums. Trucks rumble as they go by.

Her interview with Nancy Brownsberger, the first for Safe Haven, was conducted at Brownsberger's home. The phone rings. The pizza oven chimes.

Lytle says she plans to make some changes to improve the sound, but she also likes how real it is.

Amanda Lytle is over the moon about her new podcast, Safe Haven, which features moving and inspirational stories from women in the Haliburton Highlands and around the world. Episodes have been downloaded in more than 14 countries with 1,000 downloads as of last week. /JENN WATT Staff

"It's authentic. It's so real and raw. That's life," she says.

But even if the sound isn't yet where she wants it to be, people are listening. Lytle opens her laptop to show a map of the world with countries highlighted. Last week, people in 14 countries had downloaded Safe Haven including in Austria, Taiwan, Costa Rica and Sweden. By week's end the three podcasts had collectively been downloaded 1,000 times.

Pre-recorded episodes are scheduled for release each Monday with Victoria Chaulk scheduled for July 1; Heather Kennedy on July 8; and Chyna Schell on July 15.

Lytle grew up in Minden and spent several years away from the area following teachers' college, including living in Australia from 2012 to 2015. Although she knows the backstory of some of the people she's interviewing - many who live in the Haliburton Highlands - she says she often didn't have the full picture.

"Heather Kennedy, hers drops on July 8 and that's about her brother [Ryan, who died in 2011]. That one in particular I knew that story pretty much inside out,

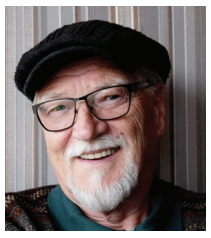
Sculptural ramblings



GEORGE FARRELL
On Arts/Culture

I THOUGHT I'D reacquaint myself with the sculptures erected last year in the Haliburton Sculpture Forest, to see how they were settling in. I also thought that I'd take a look at the annual Haliburton Outdoor Sculpture Exhibition which is in its second year.

Unlike the permanent sculptures in the forest, the downtown sculptures are for sale and are spread around both sides of the street in the downtown core. Apparently there are six of them, but I only managed to find five. Where was that sixth piece?

I phoned Jim Blake, the local arts guru who knows all about the sculptures in the forest and on our streets; but I couldn't reach him. I went back downtown for another look but still only found five sculptures. It was terribly busy, with the first influx of summer tourists, plus construction. Finding each piece is part of the fun, but I'd never had trouble locating a sculpture before. Somewhat frustrated I left downtown again and changed venues to the calm of the sculpture forest.

Last year, four new pieces were delivered to the forest. "Voyage" by Mary Ellen Farrow, "Harmony" by Jiri Genzer, "Storied Moons" by Carole Turner, and "Wind Dervish" by John McKinnon. With the exception of "Voyage" they are all abstracts, and I had this to say about where they had been placed.

"They were in a bright, rather featureless area, and seeing them so close to each other was a little unsatisfying. I expected to be able to savour each piece individually in its own intimate space." The intimate space was not so intimate. But ... surprise, Mother Nature has done her wonders and now that the sculptures are more incorporated into their environments, due to the growing of the surrounding undergrowth, it's as if the sculptures themselves have been accepted by nature and re-presented to us as finished works, if that makes sense.

I remember Blake saying, after he'd read my story, words to the effect that the sculptures would "look better a year from now." How right he was; which just proves to me that it's always prudent to listen to people who know more about a subject than you do, and that a return visit to the sculpture forest is always a great idea.

But the mystery of the "missing" piece of sculpture from the downtown outdoor exhibition keeps bugging me. Where is it? Did I just simply not find it, or is Blake messing with my head? Hmmm.

Anyway another reason to visit the sculpture forest is that on Tuesday, July 9 at 5 p.m. a new sculpture and bench will be unveiled. The works are by Scott McKay and they will be unveiled at the forest, 297 College Drive in Haliburton. Everyone is welcome to attend. As usual I will comment on the newbies when all the fuss has died down.

Haliburton Sculpture Forest outreach coordinator Noelle Dupret Smith stands alongside Haliburton Rotary Club president Ted Brandon and artist Tonya Hart as they discuss Hart's sculpture "Girl at the Fountain." The pair, alongside volunteers and workers, helped erect sculptures throughout the Haliburton Village on June 19, working almost an hour and a half on Hart's sculpture alone.

Top reasons to be glad bass season has arrived

STEVE GALEA
Humour Columnist

1. It gives you a chance to break out the cool, wrap-around fishing glasses.
2. If there was ever a time to wear your "Kiss My Bass" hat, it is now.
3. Who doesn't enjoy holding fish by the lower lip?
4. It's the only occasion where it is socially acceptable to use the term "Lunker."
5. No ice hut required.
6. You get to work on your raccoon eyes tan.
7. All you need to do is catch one two-pound bass to justify $60,000 in boats, motors and gear.
8. It's the only time of the year you're popular because you have worms.
9. Your spouse is only too happy to tell everyone about your largemouth.

Volunteers Ted Brandon and Angus Sullivan help builders place Elise Muller's "Dancers" with help from heavy machinery. The sculpture, which can be purchased for $15,000, is inspired by the sculptures seen during Muller's trip to Paris. /VANESSA BALINTEC Staff

The healing potential of sharing stories

but the rest of the world doesn't know it from her perspective," she says. "I know some of these stories, but I don't necessarily know the extent of how it's impacted them as a person. I have an idea for sure, but then I'm also meeting so many cool people."

Michelle Moraal's story of building resilience in an unstable childhood has garnered an "unbelievable" response, Lytle says.

"It is about resilience. It's about kindness. It's about being in the dark, in the dumps for so long, but being able to see the light. People have actually been reaching out to her talking about the story of your strength and resilience has really encouraged me or inspired me to get through my [problems] to move forward, or forgive, or tackle these challenges," she says.

She says that the podcast is already building networks of people connecting over the content of the programs, fulfilling the initial vision of Safe Haven. Nancy Brownsberger's episode sparked a connection with one of Lytle's friends in Vancouver, who got in touch after hearing her story.

"You never realize just how much someone else needs to hear your story until it's been shared. That can be the goods and the bads," Lytle says.

Safe Haven is available by searching the title on Apple Podcasts, Spotify, and Podbean. You can also find it on Instagram @thesafehavenpodcast or at https://thesafehavenpodcast.podbean.com.

Schedule of shows

June 3 (Online now) - Introduction

June 10 (Online now) - Nancy Brownsberger on her journey moving through depression and PTSD following a fire that destroyed her home, and on her business Grow Optimism.

June 17 (Online now) - Michelle Moraal shares her story of growing up with a mother she didn't know and a father who was addicted to drugs. Her story includes meeting a sister she didn't know she had.

June 24 (Online now) - Kortney Ecclestone (formerly Gerber) was diagnosed with epilepsy when she was in high school. She talks about what kept her going through her surgeries and struggles. She's been seizure free since her benign tumour was removed in October 2011.

July 1 - Victoria Chaulk shares her journey into her own online marketing business success, reminisces on travel, how she met her love, and how and why they work so well as a team.

July 8 - Heather Kennedy talks about how she and her family lost her brother in 2011 in a home invasion. She shares how life has changed since those dark days, weeks and months.

July 15 - Chyna Schell shares her journey with postpartum depression and anxiety, addressing the darkness and difficulties associated with PPD/PPA. She shares how she was able to wean herself off of her medication and get back to her true self, with the support of her family and friends.

Luck follows in father's footsteps at Sun Life

JENN WATT

County Life Editor

Abby Blythe Luck, daughter of Dianne and Shawn Hagerman, is putting her skills and life experience to work, becoming an associate advisor with K. Brewer Financial Services, Sun Life's office in Haliburton.

Luck, who was born and raised in Haliburton, is a world traveller, has run her own yoga studio and holds a degree in history and music. After years of travelling, she returned to Haliburton in 2013-2014 and began talking with her father, who started his life insurance business in the Highlands in 1976, about joining Sun Life.

"Growing up and having so many conversations with Dad about what he was doing and why he was doing it gave me a real appreciation for this career path and a desire to always help others," she says.

When Shawn Hagerman died in 2015, Luck says she wasn't sure if her interest in the business would continue.

"I thought that my desire to do this career might disappear, but I was surprised in the last years while teaching yoga, to see that I kept thinking about and considering it," she says.

Kyle Brewer took over Hagerman's business after he died. Last summer, Luck met with him about joining Sun Life and told him she had been diagnosed with breast cancer.

Abby Blythe Luck has joined K. Brewer Financial Services, Sun Life's Haliburton office, as a sales associate advisor. Luck's father, Shawn Hagerman, "was the pioneering agent here in the Haliburton Highlands when he started his business in 1976," Luck says. /Photo by Eleanor Dobbins Photography

"Kyle was so gracious and told me that they'd love to have me once I was ready to work," she says.

Coping with the sudden loss of her father and then with a cancer diagnosis has helped Luck better understand the obstacles people face in life, and about how useful insurance can be.

"Most people don't like to talk about worst-case scenarios, but the unfortunate truth is that incredibly difficult and unexpected things happen in our lives," she says. "I'm really touched when someone trusts me to help them with their financial protection needs."

She says financial wellbeing can help reduce life stress and she is particularly passionate about critical illness insurance, the importance of which became apparent to her when she was diagnosed with cancer and wasn't able to make a regular income.

Luck started her new job on May 1. You can get in touch with her at 705-457-1052 x.207 or by email at abby.luck@sunlife.com.

Two misty moose

I spotted a moose near the old 118
A yearling alone before dark
Been north for awhile but I hadn't yet seen
This recluse outside of the Park
A misty soft evening for us driving home
A pond in a clearing came next
I barely perceived
in the thickening gloam
A bull moose knee-deep and perplexed
Perhaps we'd disturbed them, each separate beast
From peaceful wild mammal routines
The yearling was restless, though, trotted northeast
But pond seduced bull back to greens It's awesome to see this, that wilderness reigns O Canada, please keep it strong
Because of original pristine domains
I stay so connected, belong
Like yearling which trots and sedate older moose
My needs are for freedom and space
To witness that creatures still get to be loose
Returns me to pride of this place

We have worked diligently to protect animals for 145 years in Ontario. And now, more than ever, we are committed to animal well-being in communities across the province with services like mobile spay/neuter clinics, community-based animal wellness days, animal transfer and rescue, adopt-a-thons and humane education.
The Ontario government is responsible for enforcing provincial animal welfare legislation, which is the right thing to do. We will support them and law enforcement to make sure animals in Ontario are protected. Last year we resolved over 23,000 calls from concerned citizens, and we will continue to make sure the right resources and professionals are in place and ready to respond. Because we're here for animals. And for you.

Art Squared coming to Haliburton this September

The Art Squared committee was inaugurated within Haliburton County last year to fundraise by using art to support art. Through donation and sale of almost 90 original paintings on 12-inch by 12-inch canvases, Art Squared 2018 was able to raise $3,500 towards student bursaries for painting studies at Haliburton School of Art + Design: Fleming College.

Our original motivation to fundraise came from notable Minden artist Carole Finn, who graciously provided her home and gallery for Art Squared 2018. Painter Denise LeBlanc and several other local acrylics students then eagerly formed the Art Squared committee.

This year's venue and fundraising recipient will be the Rails End Gallery and Arts Centre (Haliburton), a publicly-supported establishment devoted to local artists and to creative programming.

The Art Squared event will be held there over the weekend of Sept. 27 to 29. Original 12-inch square canvases will be sold for $100 each. Proceeds will go to the gallery and to its arts programs.

Painters who wish to donate to this special cause may check entry guidelines on the Rails End Gallery and Arts Centre website (railsendgallery.com) or "like" the Art Squared Haliburton County Facebook page to browse our growing 2019 donation album, plus the 2018 artwork which has already sold.

In the name of painting, artists may use oil, acrylic, watercolour, or any other medium which can be "painted" onto a standard hangable 12-inch square canvas.

The Sept. 27 to 29, Art Squared event will feature fresh new painting donations at $100 per canvas, a free raffle, food and drink.

Please join us Friday evening Sept. 27 at 6 p.m. (for earliest opportunity to choose favourite pieces) or over that weekend, buy some lovely original art, and help keep local painting and programs alive!

Master's Book Store marks 40 years

Kathy Stouffer, centre, was joined by Velma Smith, left, and Pat Hardy at Haliburton's Master's Book Store, which celebrated 40 years in business with a celebration on June 15. Hardy was the original owner of the independent bookstore, which she said was just 10-by-10 with $1,500 worth of merchandise when it opened in 1979. She sold it to her sister, Bev Wootton, Stouffer and Smith in the '80s. On Saturday, Stouffer, the current proprietor, was so busy with customers, she took just a quick moment to cut the cake before returning to the store's checkout counter./SUE TIFFIN Staff

Beach monitoring program tests water safety

Just in time for the arrival of summer, the health unit's beach water monitoring program is back to help people determine if the water is safe for swimming.

Between now and Labour Day, the Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge District Health Unit will regularly test the water at 45 public beaches in Northumberland County, Haliburton County and the City of Kawartha Lakes. Water samples will be tested for E.coli to determine if local beaches are safe for public use.

The health unit will update beach water test results by late Thursday or early Friday each week throughout summer. People can get the latest results on the health unit website (www.hkpr.on.ca) or via Twitter (www.twitter.com/HKPRDHU) and Facebook (www.facebook.com/HKPRDHU). Information is also available by calling 1-866-888-4577, ext. 5006.

"Before going to the beach, people should check to see if local beaches are safe for swimming," says Bernie Mayer, manager of environmental health with the HKPR District Health Unit. "In certain circumstances, beaches can provide more than just fun and recreation. A higher bacteria count in the water can increase the risk of getting eye, ear, nose or throat infections, or make people sick leading to stomach cramps and diarrhea."

This summer, beachgoers may notice new metal signs being put up at some of the busier public beaches in Northumberland County, Haliburton County and City of Kawartha Lakes. Besides being more durable, these metal signs are also more visible for people to see whether a beach is safe for swimming.

At other beaches, the health unit will continue to post warning signs on those that have high bacteria counts, advising people not to use the water. These signs are removed when test results show the bacteria counts are below the provincial standards.

Mayer advises people going to the beach to be aware of other warning signs that could affect the water quality.

"Beach water may contain high levels of bacteria for up to 48 hours after a heavy rainfall. High winds or wave activity can also drive up bacterial counts in the water," he says. "Another warning sign can be the presence of a large number of birds, such as geese or seagulls nesting near the beach. Fecal matter from these birds can drive up bacterial counts in the water."

Algae, floating debris, oil, discoloured water, bad odours and excessive weed growth are other potential signs that the beach may be unsafe for swimming. Prolonged hot weather can promote the growth of bacteria in the water, as can the actual water temperature. For example, shallow beaches tend to have warmer water and a higher potential for bacterial growth. "If you have doubts about water safety," says Mayer, "avoid the beach and try again when conditions improve."

For media inquiries, contact: Bernie Mayer, manager of environmental health, HKPR District Health Unit, 1-866-888-4577, ext. 1243.

Tug of War

A curved stone path beckons me to follow, to explore, to discover where it leads.
A chipmunk scurries along it, stopping to look back, enticing me to come along.

Unseen birds sing in the trees,
igniting a voice within me in song.
The sun breaks through the heavy canopy, speckling the ground with spheres of light, dancing along the stones.

Enticing me to follow,
perhaps to even dance and sing along as I go on my way.
I feel the pull of tasks at hand,
the pressure to complete.
A tug of war ensues between,
the force of each attraction.

Allow the tasks I've taken on to consume my every moment, or set them aside and follow along new paths of my attraction.

Murmur

Sun unspooling threads of light, weaving through water and Air,
pooling in puddles of clouds that float on the lake,
flat as glass, mirroring the stillness of Sky,
that cradles a wafer of morning Moon, fading before my eyes, as I sit on the dock
'till it's swallowed by Sky.
Breeze rumpling clouds as they wobble on the Lake,
the murmur of water, as wavelets rock the dock,
its planks worn by weather and time.
I listen to the rhythm of water lapping against wood, feel the motion roll through my bones,
the rhythm of leaving and returning to stillness again,
the anchor of dock, this secret spot,
that welcomes me whenever I crave its company, solid as the hands that built it, their memory
imprinted in the wood.
I gaze out at the green sheen of Lake, hills spilling into it, their reflection, real as the trees fringing the shore.
How warm, the planks feel, as I graze their grooves,
the spots that have begun to rot,
the splinters that once grew on a tree,
my fingers exploring the landscape of their history.

Light flowing through the reeds,
splashing across the dock, silence, soft as moss, cloaking me, as I savour this moment on the dock, solitary as the duck that floats past me, its emerald collar glistening in the Sun.
I watch it disappear beneath the water,
the ripples it creates sway the dock,
gentle as breeze rustling through the reeds.
I watch for its resurfacing, wondering what it's foraging for, in the forest of Lake, a world as rich as the one I breathe.
A flash of green, as the duck re-emerges, a fleck, far from the dock, where I watch, marvelling at the distance it swam in such a short span of time,
Air and light luring it back up, to float along the ripples its resurfacing creates, that widen until they reach the shore,
the murmur of water lapping in my ears, as I recline, tiny as a splinter, on the dock, letting Sky and hills spill into me, fingering the gaps and gouges in the wood, feeling sunlight soothe its wounds.

HALIBURTON BIA

WE DON'T BREW OUR BEER FOR THE AWARDS.

BUT HE DOES!

Our brewmaster, Andrew Kohnen, threw away a successful career in logistics to pursue his dream of reconnecting with the brewing roots of his family. This carried him to the UK's prestigious Brewlab in Sunderland, England, where he procured the alchemy that would drive his signature brewing style.

He took what he could from there and ventured to Scotland, Cornwall, and ultimately to Krefeld, Germany, working in the same brewery that had belonged to his ancestors. He came home to Canada for Hockley.

You could call it dumb, but we call it destiny.

RICHARD MARGISON Artistic Director

HEAR THE BEST YOUNG PROFESSIONAL VOICES FROM ACROSS NORTH AMERICA!

OPERAS

WOMEN IN OPERA: THEN & NOW

Puccini's 'Suor Angelica' (50 minutes, fully-staged, w/English Surtitles) followed by 2 newly created short works, 'The Chair' and 'Book of Faces' from winners of a new prize, created by Musique 3 Femmes, honouring emerging Canadian women composers and librettists.

Suor Angelica (Giacomo Puccini) Tragedy, death and redemption on the landscape of Puccini's lush score.

The Chair (Atallah & Abracen) The opera explores friendship, loss and grief through the eyes of a teenager.

Book of Faces (Harder & Telford) An irreverent, tongue-in-cheek operatic take on the many faces of social media.

Toronto's trash hasn't yet infiltrated cottage country

by ALLISON TAYLOR

Minden Hills officials have decided to keep their eyes on trash levels at the local landfills as the piles of trash start to pile in the streets of Toronto.

"I don't know if it's possible, but maybe we should start watching our volume at local landfills," said Councillor Bill Obee at a recent council meeting.

"I agree [cottagers] pay taxes here, but they don't pay taxes to get rid of garbage generated elsewhere," he said.

The concern with overcrowding local landfill started to increase after members of Toronto's Canadian Union of Public Employees Local 416, including road crews and garbage collectors, went on strike in the big city.

Obee suggested the township look into monitoring the levels of trash that are brought into the landfills to ensure the garbage that is dumped is not transported from another place.

Public Works Superintendent Clayton Cameron said he hasn't seen overly high levels of trash at the landfills so far.

He said the July 1st weekend was busy, but long weekends are usually busy in the summer months.

"If the levels are going to change then we should start to see something this week," he said.

Landfill attendants don't regularly keep track of the number of vehicles entering the landfill sites, but from time to time they do monitor the traffic, he said.

"So far, we haven't seen anything out of the ordinary."

Smell prompts calls

Where there's smoke, there's not always a local fire

by JERRY GROZELLE
Times staff

The Ministry of Natural Resources Fire Centre in Haliburton, and local fire departments, were flooded with telephone calls Saturday morning. The smell of smoke and the hazy weather conditions prompted the calls from people who were concerned that there might be a fire in the area.

Jim Caverly, a fire management technician at the fire centre, said he believes the smoke is from fires in Quebec. "We've had calls from as far away as Stone Mills township north of Kingston, from Havelock and Pembroke and areas west of here," he said Saturday morning. "The phone started to ring at 8 o'clock this morning. We've easily fielded at least 50 to 60 calls already.

"There are no active fires currently burning in this area at this time," Caverly said at about 9:45 Saturday morning. "We had a small fire in some roots in Algonquin Park and a vehicle fire on Highway 69 about 45 kilometres north of Parry Sound yesterday." Both of those fires were extinguished.

The ministry sent personnel out on flights over Algonquin Park and other areas Friday and more were planned for Saturday.

Caverly said five fire fighting crews and a liaison officer were sent to help control fires near the Quebec community of Chibougamau Saturday morning. None were from the Haliburton base.
